Goldilocks: Wanted Dead or Alive

The kingdoms of the fairy-tale world are enjoying a much-needed period of peace. After the imprisonment of her evil stepmother, Snow White inherited her father's throne and was crowned queen of the Northern Kingdom. In the Eastern Kingdom, Queen Sleeping Beauty and her people have finally awoken from the terrible one-hundred-year sleeping curse. In the south, the Charming Kingdom has been in a constant state of celebration since King Chance Charming married his beloved consort, Queen Cinderella.

In the southwest, Queen Rapunzel established the Corner Kingdom after inheriting land from the witch who infamously imprisoned her in a tower. The Red Riding Hood Kingdom was founded by a large farming community that successfully separated from the Northern Kingdom. They elected Red Riding Hood as their queen, and her first royal act was naming the nation after herself.

The Fairy Godmother and her Fairy Council oversee the majestic Fairy Kingdom in the southeast. Together, the fairies and the kingdoms of man have created the Happily Ever After Assembly—a coalition that maintains peace and prosperity throughout the land.

While the humans and fairies are united in diplomacy, not all territories in the fairy-tale world have been invited to their union. After centuries of rambunctious behavior, the troll and goblin populations have been confined to the Troll and Goblin Territory deep underground in the east. The elves live in the secluded Elf Empire in the northwest. The majority of the west is occupied by the Dwarf Forests, where criminals are allowed to roam free from laws and convictions.

Despite the vast range of people and creatures living in the fairy-tale world, there is nothing threatening the harmony between borders in any way...
